Association of America

The articles that fill the pages of the first fifteen volumes of Comparative Literature provide conclusive cumulative evidence of an implicit thesis: that, in their literatures, men live in "one world"—that, transcending the barriers of language and national culture, the peoples of the world have a vast common heritage of literary themes, types, movements, styles, and techniques, and have always been engaged in a lively interchange of literary ideas and works.

Students of comparative literature who contribute to CL are concerned with tracing these relationships. They are also interested in those similarities that reflect, not influence, but simply the common experience and humanity of man.

This cumulative index to Volumes I to XV of CL is designed to provide a convenient guide to the contents of the journal. It is being distributed, free of charge, to scholars and libraries throughout the world. The index provides, in one alphabet, a generous selection of subject entries, with references to both articles and book reviews, and a complete index of authors of articles and reviews and of authors of books reviewed.

The subscription price of CL is $3.50 a year. Complete sets are still available, for $3.50 a volume.

comparative literature

FOUNDED at a time when the strengthening of good international relations is of paramount importance, Comparative Literature provides a forum for those scholars and critics who are engaged in the study of literature from an international point of view. Its editors define comparative literature in the broadest possible manner, and accept articles dealing with the manifold interrelations of literatures, with the theory of literature, movements, genres, periods, and authors—from the earliest times to the present. Comparative Literature particularly welcomes longer studies on comprehensive topics and on problems of literary criticism.
